

RECLAIM

Natural History Consortium's Reclaim Mini-Conference

Abby Charlesworth,
Programme Officer

Who we are

The Natural History Consortium

FESTIVAL OF NATURE

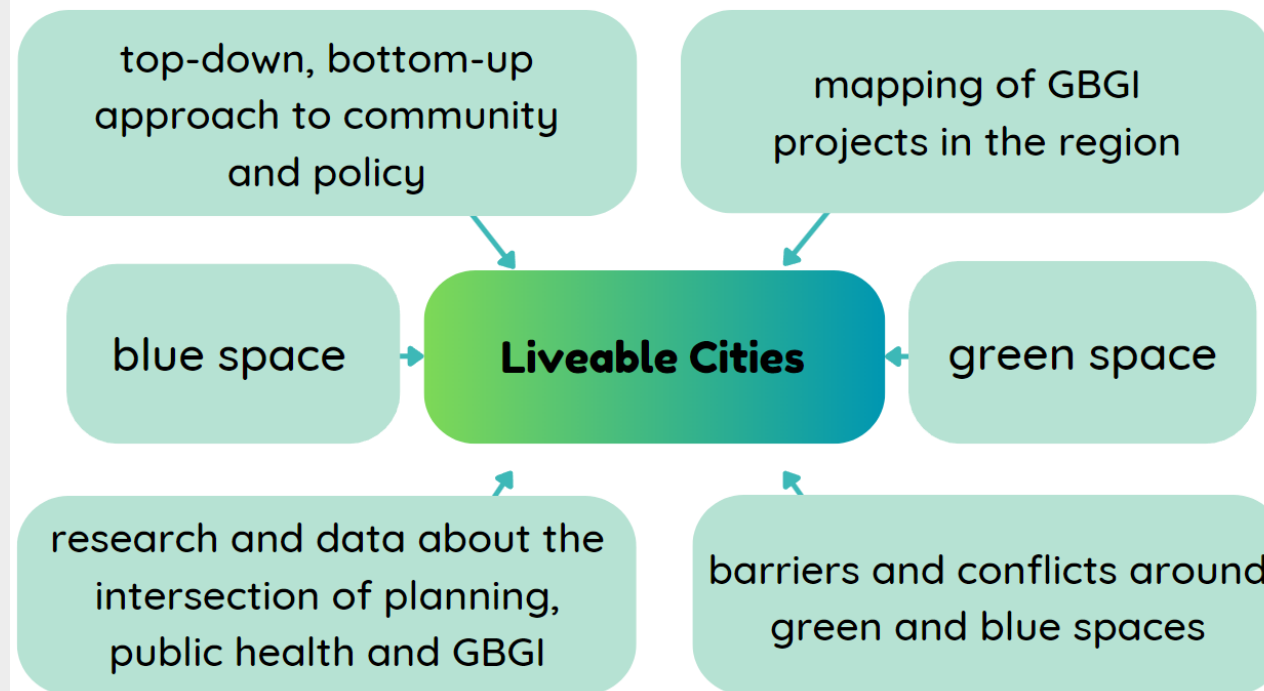

Workshop Aims

- Create opportunities for cross-sector working
- Discuss ways to engage the public around GBGI

Reclaim Mini Conference 14th June 2023

An insight into the day's learnings.

Workshop Takeaways

Learning from the day:

- » Create more events like this to allow better opportunities for cross-sector working, bringing together charities, councils and academics.
- » Understanding of the importance of local voluntary groups and social structures in creating more biodiversity in our cities.
- » Grasping the nuances between nature recovery and human health and wellbeing.
- » Thinking about our choice of language in presenting ideas around nature to the public, ie: biodiversity net gain versus nature's recovery.

Good outcomes:

- » 'You squeezed so much value into the 2 hour session. The talks were interesting and informative, and the conversations and connections made around the tables just as valuable.'
- » 'We will make use of knowledge and connections around green prescribing in a new project we are soon to deliver.'
- » 'I spoke to a number of other people who provided insight into various topics, expanding my knowledge to apply to our own projects. Knowledge which would have been difficult to obtain by other means. Thanks so much!'

Organisations in Attendance

- » Bath University
- » University of the West of England (Quality of Life data)
- » Open University
- » University of Bristol
- » South Gloucester Council
- » Bristol City Council
- » Bath and North East Somerset Council
- » National Trust
- » Bristol Avon Rivers Trust
- » Avon Wildlife Trust
- » Vita Health Group/NHS
- » West of England Combined Authority